

Ecosystem Maps of Lead-Safe Stakeholder Organizations in Detroit

Introduction:

The Ecosystem Maps of Lead-Safe Stakeholder Organizations in Detroit is a tool for visualizing the various stakeholder organizations involved in ending child lead poisoning in Detroit, their roles and activities within Detroit's lead-safe ecosystem, and their relations with each other. The Ecosystem Maps illustrate the network of organizations related to a specific commitment or involvement in the lead-safe ecosystem.

We define a lead-safe ecosystem as the system of actors who engage in — or are otherwise impacted by — activities related to reducing the risk of child lead poisoning and intervening when it does occur, as well as the conditions under which these actors must operate (including laws and policies, funding landscapes, housing stock conditions, etc.).

These maps are best read alongside the Directory of Lead-Safe Stakeholder Organizations in Detroit, which further details organizations' missions, activities, partnerships, and website and contact information.

The Ecosystem Maps of Lead-Safe Stakeholder Organizations in Detroit is a collaborative project between the City of Detroit Housing & Revitalization Department and Poverty Solutions at the University of Michigan. These maps provide a snapshot of Detroit's lead-safe ecosystem as of July 2023, and will be updated annually. If you have any questions or edits, please contact Leonymae Aumentado at lfaument@umich.edu.

How to Read:

The Complete Map on page 2 shows all of the stakeholders in the lead-safe ecosystem, categorized by stakeholder group. Understanding this map is necessary to reading the other maps.

For government and academic center stakeholders, stakeholders are listed by name in bold text. Offices, divisions, and other sub-divisions are listed underneath the corresponding stakeholder organization in unbolded text. Programs and further sub-divisions are indented underneath the corresponding office, division, or sub-division.

For non-profit stakeholders, stakeholders are sub-categorized by the type of work they do. Sub-categories are listed in bold and indented text.

For all other stakeholders, stakeholders are either listed generally or by specific name in bold text. If a general stakeholder is listed, any constituent organizations or actors are listed underneath in unbolded text. Any offices, divisions, and other sub-divisions are indented underneath the corresponding organization or actor.
